

On December 26-27, 2015, within the framework of the open days, in Yerevan Brandy factory, "Erebuni" Historical & Archaeological Museum-Reserve organized a new exhibition entitled "Viticulture in Ancient Armenia". The aim of the exhibition was to introduce the tradition of the viticulture in Armenia, in particular representing the process of development of viticulture in the territory of Van or Ararat kingdom, beginning from the irrigation system, vineyard planting up to the preservation of the wine in the celeries and the usage of the necessary supplies such as jars, jugs, rhytons, plates and etc.

For 2 days, RA citizens and foreign visitors had an opportunity to get acquainted with the rich heritage of the Armenian brandy and to the unique historical and archaeological items which testified the existence of viticulture and wine making in Armenia: most of them were exhibited for the first time.
